City of Austin Vision Zero

Presented by: Lewis Leff &
Cody Stone

Lewis Leff is the Austin Transportation Department's Transportation Safety Officer, charged with leading Austin's efforts to achieve the ambitious goal of zero traffic-related fatalities and serious injuries. He has more than 15 years of experience working in the City of Austin, both developing policy solutions in a City Council Office and implementing policy within multiple City departments. Lewis brings a systems approach to his work, understanding the complex interplay of transportation policy with socio-economic issues, strategic planning, and how to leverage City processes to get things done. In this role, Lewis has worked with partners to create an internal crash database with highly accurate crash data to drive investment decisions, to develop a new equitable city-wide approach to speed management, and to implement rapid, low-cost, proven traffic safety treatments.

Cody Stone is a Program Consultant in Austin's Transportation Department, overseeing the speed management, transit enhancement, and TIA Fiscal programs. In this role, he works closely with the Vision Zero program on a variety of projects to help bring traffic-related fatalities and serious injuries to zero. Cody has over eight years of experience in leading transportation operations and design projects throughout Texas. He excels at multi-modal traffic operation modeling and safety analysis. Cody has analyzed innovative solutions such as innovative intersections, systemic safety, and active traffic management strategies. Cody works to take complex data analysis and apply for successful infrastructure improvements.

FORTERRA

Meeting Sponsored by Forterra

Forterra builds sustainable infrastructure through strategically located facilities across the United States as well as in Mexico and Eastern Canada.

Since setting our foundation in 1899, we have evolved dramatically in the areas of distribution, technology, and product development – not only to move water, but to employ its benefits for sustainable communities.

Whether providing water to homes or ensuring safe roadways, Forterra products are there to improve quality of life and help communities grow and thrive.
